Using the 10 Strengths You Didn't Know You Had to Get the Career and Life You Want Now

Female FusionSM There's a New Club in Town

Forget the book clubs, networking organizations or scrapbooking circles—there's a new and stronger club for women to activate—it's called Female FusionSM and it transforms women's lives. Vickie L. Milazzo, RN, MSN, JD, invented this powerful new method for women to collaborate. She shares how to do this in her book, Inside Every Woman: Using the 10 Strengths You Didn't Know You Had to Get the Career and Life You Want Now.

So what's needed to create a Female FusionSM gathering?

- Seek out at least three women to gather—but no more than ten.
- Pick out an intimate, private location.
- Reserve 2-4 hours of uninterrupted bonding time for the initial gathering.
- Set a goal for the gathering.

"You want to create a safe environment where members can feel free to express themselves, openly, where they can expose or confess their most closely held secrets," says Milazzo. "At my first fusion, women exchanged stories they had never told anyone, not even their closest family members."

For the past two decades she's worked with, trained and mentored thousands of successful women, and she believes one of the key aspects of personal and professional development comes from women supporting, nurturing and challenging one another.

"Female FusionSM is an opportunity to engage the 10 Feminine Forces in your life at levels you might never reach alone. Women respond to collaboration in so many areas of life—relationships, wealth, health, careers, family—and Female FusionSM is a formal way to make that happen," says Milazzo.

Fusion is not a social or networking group. Everyone in the Fusion needs to have a desire to improve their lives. The most powerful Fusion groups include women who admire and trust each other and who will pull together for everyone's purpose. They represent a diversity of age, profession and talent.

"When women come together and share their distinct experiences, passions, visions, fears and promises, an amazing bond occurs. From that bond emerges sparks of brilliance and insight that none of these women alone, or in any other combination, could have inspired. Female FusionSM is the most powerful Feminine Force of all," says Milazzo.
